USE OF COOKIES

A “cookie” is a string of information which assigns the User a unique identifier that we store on the User’s computer/system. The User’s browser then provides that unique identifier to use each time the User submits a query to this Website. We use cookies on the Site to, among other things, keep track of services the User has used, record registration information, record the user preferences, keep the User logged into this Website, facilitate purchase procedures, and track the pages the User visits. Cookies help us understand how this website is being used and improve the experience.

SESSION COOKIES

Session cookies are temporary cookies that are used to remember the User during the course of User’s visit to this website, and they expire when the User closes the web browser.

CONTROL OF COOKIES

Most browsers are set to accept cookies by default. However, the User can remove or reject cookies in the browser’s settings. Please be aware that such action could affect the availability and functionality of this Website.

For more information on how to control cookies, check the browser or device’s settings for how to control or reject cookies.
